

Poem of Ramayana

King Dasharata, the childless king, wanted an heir.
God Vishnu agrees to come to the Earth as Rama, the king's son.

God Vishnu agreed to come to the Earth as Rama,
Rama, God Vishnu's avatar destroyed Ravana.

Queen Kaikeyi and King Disharata made Bharata the king,
but sent Rama to forest for 14 years.

Even though King Bharata wanted Rama to be the king,
Rama refused and just walked toward the forest with Lakshmana his wife Sita.

King Dasharata dies and the kingdom wanted Rama to come back,
Rama, the avatar of King Vishnu refused to return home.

Rama, Lakshmana and Sita wandered in the forest,
but something happened to Rama.

In forest, Rama meets Surpanakha, the sister of the demon, Ravana.
She wanted to marry him, but he refused.

Surpanakha, who got angry by Rama's rejection, demands her brothers to punish him.

Ravana, the brother of Surpanakha kidnaps Sita and killed Jatayu,
Jatayu, the guy who tried to stop this rebellion.

A follower of Ravana, who turned into a splendid deer, get the attention from Sita.

To save her, Lakshman drew shapes around Sita, hoping it would work properly.

Ravana took away Sita and brought her to his palace,

when Rama and his brother's were engaged.

To find Sita, Rama brothers began searching Sita, who was lost.

They met the two-killed a demon, who was claiming help the monkey king, Sugriva.

The brothers, who were deeply desperate, found a way to regain a rule of kingdom

To retrieve Sita, Sugriva sent his armies and his strongest general, Hamuman.

To save Sita, Rama proposed construction of bridge, which connected to island.

After all Ravana defeated because the siege was completed, and finally Sita was rescued.

(Rama, Sita and Lakshmana wandering around in the forrest.)